RE: Case 18-M-0084 In the Matter of a Comprehensive Energy Efficiency Initiative

Dear Secretary Burgess,

Thermostat Recycling Corporation (TRC) respectfully submits these informal comments for the consideration of the New York Public Services Commission (NYPSC), New York State Energy Research Development (NYSERDA), and any other interested stakeholders. Although the nature of TRC's operations were not discussed during any of the EE Forums, we would like to offer this set of comments for the NYPSC to consider. It is in the best interests for all New Yorkers to consider the obligations of mercury thermostat recycling during any proposed energy efficiency programs, particularly those that encourage the replacement of HVAC systems, components, and thermostats. The Governor's directive to develop a comprehensive energy efficiency plan by Earth Day is an excellent opportunity for the NYPSC to collaborate with TRC's program while also adhering to the Governor's directive for the NYDEC to work directly with NYSEERDA, NYS Division of Housing and Community Renewal, Department of Public Service, and the New York Power Authority (attached) on Assembly Bill Number 8084, "Title 29 - Mercury Thermostat Collection Act."

If you should have any questions about these comments please do not hesitate to directly contact me at 571-302-0877 or ryan.kiscaden@thermostat-recycle.org.

Respectfully submitted,

GENERAL COMMENTS

Three prominent manufacturers of residential thermostats – Honeywell, White-Rodgers, and General Electric – voluntarily established the nonprofit Thermostat Recycling Corporation (TRC) in 1998 to facilitate the proper management of mercury thermostats at end-of-life. TRC now has 31 corporate members and is the only national program of its kind in the US (see www.thermostat-recycle.org) dedicated to recycling mercury thermostats. We have recycled more than 2.4 million mercury thermostats nationwide, thereby diverting more than 11 tons of mercury from the solid waste stream.

It has been our belief that energy efficiency is first driven by environmental considerations. The reason these initiatives begin are largely due to reduced energy use, which ultimately impacts the environment – particularly the carbon footprint in the state of New York. Because of this, it is important to alert the NYPSC of existing legislations (both federal and New York) and the components of one particular product which this vision may be targeting unintentionally, mercury-containing thermostats.

The New York State Department of Public Service (DPS) and the New York State Energy Research and Development Authority (NYSERDA) planned to engage stakeholders and propose a comprehensive energy efficiency initiative by Earth Day, April 22, 2018, at the direction of Governor Andrew Cuomo (D), who included this as part of his 2018 State of the State Address. The purpose of these topical forums was for stakeholders with relevant expertise to discuss and share information relevant to each specific topic with DPS and NYSERDA Staff in support of the aforementioned energy efficiency proposal. Some of the themes included certain cross-cutting themes which will be considered in all of the sessions, including driving scale, cost reduction, and low-income market penetration.

TRC welcomes the opportunity to comment on this energy efficiency initiative announced by the NYPSC and to deepen relationships with utility companies and subsequent stakeholders throughout the state of New York. Our comments are presented below.

BACKGROUND

Mercury-switch thermostats have been widely used to control heating and cooling systems since the 1950's. Mercury thermostats dominated the market until the early 1990s when electronic thermostats began to gain wider acceptance. Moreover, many were replaced long before that date with non-mercury units because electronic programmable thermostats had become available years prior. It should be pointed out that by the way in which these products were designed, mercury-containing thermostats do not have any ability to be setback or have programmable features, both of which are key functions in helping lower energy usage costs in buildings. These devices essentially acted as an on and off switch for many applications such as boilers, central air conditioners, room air conditioners, and heat pumps.

As technology evolved, major manufacturing of mercury-switch thermostats slowed or completely ceased by 2007. While the number remaining in use today is unknown, they are still found on some heating and cooling systems installed prior to 2007 in residential single-family homes (attached, detached, or semi-attached), residential multi-family complexes (apartments and low-income housing), light commercial buildings (hotels, restaurants, banks, retail outlets), educational buildings (schools, colleges, libraries), and military facilities. Because of their mercury content, ANY PERSON OR CONTRACTOR who removes a mercury thermostat as part of an energy efficiency initiative or program, should be required to recycle that thermostat through the TRC, which is widely accessible and cost-free.

RESOURCE CONSERVATION RECOVERY ACT (RCRA)

RCRA is a federal law which regulates the disposal of hazardous material. This law addresses widely used mercury-containing devices such as mercury-switch thermostats, which are classified under 40 CFR 273 as “universal waste.” The law specifies that any mercury-containing thermostat coming out of commercial buildings must be recycled in one year's time. Certain states are more restrictive and require thermostats removed from any structure to be recycled, with some states instituting disposal bans, mandatory manufacturer funding for a take back program, requirements on local businesses to act as a collection location, and mandatory recycling if the demand side project is affiliated with state or rate payer funds. The regulation served to relax the requirements on collection locations for these devices so as to facilitate recycling.

NEW YORK STATE LEGISLATION – Assembly Bill No. 8084, Title 29 – MERCURY THERMOSTAT COLLECTION ACT

Statutory Authorities:

Each thermostat manufacturer shall, individually or collectively, with other thermostat manufacturers, establish and maintain a program for the collection, transportation, recycling, disposal and proper management of out-of-service mercury thermostats in accordance with the provisions of this section.

And

Any person or contractor who replaces a mercury-containing thermostat from a building shall deliver the mercury-containing thermostats to an appropriate collection site.

And

Any department, authority, instrumentality, or municipal corporation of the state administering a program that involves the removal or replacement of mercury containing thermostats as a result of any statutory requirement, shall inform contractors of their statutory obligations to deliver the mercury-containing thermostats to a collection site and prohibiting the disposal of such thermostats in a solid-waste facility.

And

Any contractor, organization or subcontractor of such organization, who contracts with or receives funding or financing provided in whole or in part by or through any department, agency, instrumentality, or political subdivision of the state for the installation, service, or removal of heating, ventilation, or air-conditioning components resulting in the removal or handling of out-of-service mercury thermostats, shall ensure the collection, transportation and proper management of out-of-service mercury thermostats in accordance with the provisions of title 29 of article 27 of the environmental conservation law.

DEVELOPING ENFORCEABLE STANDARDS

TRC collection rates are driven by continued, active engagement of all parties in the “chain of custody” once the thermostat is removed from service. In the context of energy efficiency initiatives, this would include utility companies, any contractor or subcontractor hired to do work related to energy efficiency, building owners and managers, and the responsible state agencies. The best approach for growing thermostat collections continues to be shared responsibility from all responsible parties; aided and abetted by a strong working relationship between federal, state, and local authorities and TRC.

At a minimum, any energy efficiency program or initiative that involves switching out a mercury thermostat for any reason should:

1. Require the vendor, all subcontractors, and affiliated parties in the trade channel, including trade allies, preferred installation vendors, or rebate processors to comply with all applicable federal, state, and local regulations in relation to the proper management and disposal of waste mercury thermostats generated in the performance of the requested scope of work.

2. Describe efforts to inform program subcontractors and affiliated parties in the trade channel, including trade allies, preferred installation vendors, or rebate processors on the planned steps to support and/or facilitate the collection of mercury thermostats generated through this program by direct participation in the TRC program.
3. Demonstrate how it has described procedures that all employees, technicians, or direct installers have, or will follow, a process to identify mercury thermostats and ensure proper management of all mercury thermostats removed from service. The vendor shall also describe the procedures to monitor and document compliance with the above requirement, and for meeting post-project reporting requirements set forth by the energy efficiency program. A post project report should contain at a minimum the following information: total number of thermostats installed; total number of mercury thermostats removed from service; the total number of mercury thermostats recycled; and the location(s) where the thermostats were recycled, either by direct participation or from validation from the collection point.

For further background, the TRC program can provide either a shippable, sturdy recycling container to participate directly in the program, or will promote the available local collection locations to drop off these devices. Many HVAC wholesalers, as well as retailers and household hazardous waste facilities, participate in the TRC program as drop-off sites. A list of drop-off sites in New York are attached as Appendix 1 with the file being sorted by county, then city, then collection location name.

CONCLUSION

All energy efficiency projects start first with environmental considerations. If any energy efficiency program directly or indirectly requires the replacement of a thermostat, then it is inconsistent with existing federal and state regulations to dispose of these devices otherwise. Any thermostat that contains mercury requires more oversight and monitoring from all responsible parties that influenced the replacement. This means enforcing any company and their employees responsible for the energy efficiency replacement work to properly follow local, state, and federal environmental regulations. An appropriate protocol would be to develop and enforce standards related to environmental compliance and use of the TRC program directly, or by validating when thermostats are recycled properly at an existing collection point.

STATE OF NEW YORK
EXECUTIVE CHAMBER
ALBANY 12224

CHAPTER # 550
APPROVAL # 13

MEMORANDUM filed with Assembly Bill Number 8084, entitled:

DEC 19 2013

“AN ACT to amend the environmental conservation law, in relation to establishing the mercury thermostat collection act; and providing for the repeal of such provisions upon expiration thereof”

APPROVED

This legislation builds upon the current voluntary mercury thermostat collection program run by Thermostat Recycling Corporation by establishing a mandatory program. The bill sets an achievable goal for the collection of out-of service thermostats for the first year, with the Department of Environmental Conservation (DEC) establishing the collection goal in future years.

Proper management of mercury containing products is a shared responsibility. To help achieves this bill's objective, I hereby direct DEC to reach out to state agencies and authorities that offer energy efficiency programs such as the New York State Energy Research Development Authority, NYS Division of Housing and Community Renewal, Department of Public Service, and the New York Power Authority to assist them in ensuring that their contractors comply with the bill's collection requirements and disposal prohibition. This will help in meeting the initial collection goal of 15,500 mercury thermostats in 2015.

In the absence of this legislation, discarded mercury thermostats would be required to be regulated as hazardous waste; therefore, this bill would not result in any change in their treatment under the law. In addition, collected mercury thermostats may continue to be managed under the Universal Waste rule. The rule provides streamlined requirements for mercury thermostats by eliminating the burden of manifesting these materials while providing appropriate environmental controls. This will reduce manufacturers' costs to comply and ensure that proper management of collected mercury thermostats is not overly burdensome to industry. This legislation will significantly increase the number of mercury thermostats properly managed, resulting in a safer and healthier environment for all New Yorkers.

For these reasons, I am signing this bill.
